ANOTHER WRIT FOR JUDGE COX

Judge Brown Again Cites Him to Appear in the Jennie Carr Case.

Herman C. Tuttle Appointed Receiver of the Commercial Accident Association, of This City-Other Courts.

Judge Brown yesterday issued an alternative writ of mandate, citing Judge Cox, of the Criminal Court, to appear in the Circuit Court, at 9 o'clock A. M., on Sept. 16, and show cause, if any there be, why he refuses to take action upon the motion of Jennie Carr for a change of venue from the county. Jennie Carr was convicted of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to life imprisonment. The decision of the lower court was afterwards reversed and ber attorneys, Perkins & Hord, then filed a motion for a change of venue from the county, which was supported by affidavits alleging bias and prejudice. This motion was afterwards stricken from the files, and the writ of mandate was sued for to compel Judge Cox to show cause why he refuses to consider it.

THE MONEY WAS ALL GONE.

A Receiver Appointed for Commercial Accident Association, of This City. Upon the petition of E. S. R. Seguin, treasurer of the company, Herman C. Tuttle was yesterday afternoon appointed receiver for the Commercial Accident Association, of this city, by Judge Harper, Five of the seven directors of the company were agreed that a receiver should be put in charge of the affairs of the company, as no money was coming into the treasury, although the company was doing a good business in its line. The company was organized about six months with the following directors: W. T. Noble president, W. H. Levey vice president, G. H. Childs secretary, E. S. R. Seguin treasurer, James M. Leathers and John Holtzman attorneys, and S. R. Barnett, of Pittsburg. Pa., Eastern man ager. Mr. Seguin said that the money had all been paid out of the treasury and none was coming in for the new business being secured by the company, and at the last meeting of the directors a demand was made upon the secretary to know the cause of this, and he could give none. Under these circumstances it was deemed ad-

Yesterday morning William H. Snapp filed suit on account against Charles Doe, the Michigan contractor, and made silidavit upon which a writ of attachment was issued. The writ was placed in the hands of Constable Sorters to serve, and when the constable arrived at the place where Doe had a horse stabled, he found the doors nailed and barred. The constable crawled through a small hole in the barn and attached the horse and broke the door open to get out of the stable. Both Doe and his son used much profane language in expressing their opinion of the officer, but he took the horse, nevertheless, till the ac-count was settled. Afterwards the con-stable filed affidavits before Justice Daniels against both father and son for profanity. A change of venue was taken to Johnston's court, and a piez of guilty entered in one case and the other dismissed.

CHARGES AGAINST WHALEN,

Rebecca W. Connor Petitions for a Receivership of a Haroware Company. The Indiana Trust Company was yesterday made receiver of the Connor Hardware Company upon the application of Rebecca W. Connor. In her complaint against Charles A. Whalen, the general manager of the company, which was filed in the Supecior Court yesterday afternoon, she alleges that in March, of this year, she entered into an agreement with Whalen for the establishment of the business, she furnishing all the capital and Whalen was to take charge of the business at a salary of $50 per month, which was to continue for three years, at the end of which time he was to become half owner of the business and remain its general manager. In pursuance of this agreement the store was opened at No. 79 South Illinois street. The plaintiff alleges that she is a woman, thirty-six years of age, and unacquainted with business transactions, but entered into the agreement with Whalen for the establishment of the business upon the representations of the latter that it would be a profitable investment.

She charges that owing to his bad mangement the firm has become involved to a greater extent than it was able to pay and could not meet its habilities. He had refused to permit her to examine the books and represented to her that the liabilities of the firm would not exceed $3,500, whereas in fact they would amount to more than $5,000. She also charges that Whalen has drawn from the firm $400 in excess of his salary. When the firm was organized, she alleges, she put into the business $9,600, and has since drawn out about $1,000. Whalen, she sileges, affirms that she has drawn from the business the sum of $3,600, but failed to produce the vouchers showing the withdrawal. The trust company filed its acceptance of the trust and was put into possession of the property.

THE COURT QUIETED HER. Dora Carter and Her Busband Fall Out and

the Justices Profit. Dora Carter was arrested, yesterday, upon an affidavit charging her with associating with evil characters. The affidavit upon which she was arrested was filed in Justice Daniels's court by her husband, and when the woman was brought in she was very indignant and was not loath to give expression to her wrath. She cursed everybody and informed the court that her husband had filed the affidavit in that court because she could not get justice "One dollar for contempt of court," calmly replied the court. This had the effect of quieting her, and after she had paid the fine she gave bond for her appearance for trial Monday afternoon. Later in the day she filed affidavits against her busband in Justices Habich and Johnston's courts. charging him with the same offense with which she had been charged.

Apart Under the Same Roof. Anna M. Brown yesterday filed suit for divorce from Charles Brown, alleging cruelty as a cause for the divorce. They were married in 1865, but the complainant says that for five years past the defendant has refused to treat her as a wife, and that during this time each has separate portion of their home. They own several pieces of real estate in the southwestern section of the city as tenants in entirety, and the defendant owns real estate in other parts of the city, which is held in his individual name. In addition to the decree of divorce she asks for partition of the real estate held jointly and for $5,000 alimony.

Couples Bound Over.

Henry Jones and Ella Gallamore were held by Justice Daniels, yesterday, under bond in the sum of $400 for the action of the grand jury. They were strested for immorality. John W. Whitset and Elizabeth Peterson, residing in West Newton, were arrested yesterday upon warrants 1ssued from Justice Daniels's court, and, in default of bond in the sum of $400, were committed to jail pending their prelimipary hearing this week.

Pleaded Guilty to Burglary. William Bailey, a sixteen-year-old boy, was arraigned in the Criminal Court yesterday on an affidavit and information charging him with, on that day, having any address for 25 cents.

THE POOL IS BROKEN.

Evidence that the Machine Men Will Exhibit at the Fair.

Secretary Kennedy, of the State Board of Agriculture, has nominations for sale in each of the colt stakes that closed April 18, each of which consists of a guaranteed purse of $300. They are for two and threeyear-old pacers and trotters. These must be closed by Sept. 15. The entries in the various departments are coming in rapidly. especially in the women's department. For some time during the preparation for the fair it seemed as though there was a pool among the machine men to not exhibit at the fair. Recently this compact has been broken, and now they are rushing for, exhibit space. The entries in the eight classes of the speed department closed last Wednesday, and up to this date there have been nearly 150 entries received, an average of over fifteen to the class. "Good evening, sir," said the Mayor. 'Can I do anything for you this evening!' "Mr. Sullivan, do you intend to take any steps towards closing the gambling rooms that are infesting the city." "You will find out what I intend to do after it is done. I do not intend to tell beforehand what I expect to do."

"Then you refuse to say whether you will close the gambling rooms or not?" "I do not know that there are any such places in the city."

"Have you not heard that there were!" "Well, in political times, you know, you can hear most anything." "Did you never hear in times that were not political that there were gambling rooms in operation here?"

BATTICH SLASHES HIS WIFE.

A Colored Man Makes a Murderous Assault on His Spouse.

William Battich and wife Alice, colored, living at 359 Blackford street, quarreled yesterday. In a fit of rage Battich struck at his wife with a large knife, and she was severely cut on the leg. The shouts for help which came from Mrs. Battich attracted the neighbors who rushed in and found Battich flourishing the bloody weapon in his hand. The neighbors state that he was evidently intending to kill her, and probably would have done so had they not interfered The woman says that her busband tried to cut her throat and in attempting to ward off the blow, she received a cut on the leg. She says that they had been quarreling about some trivial matter, when her husband unex-pectedly attacked her with the knife. Dr. pronounced quite serious, though not Battich left the house as the neighbors entered. The police began a search for Battich, but it was unsuccessful. Battich and his wife have both been in Police Court a number of times. It seems also that the wife has at times gotten the better of her busband, as she has been guilty of giving him a good thrashing on different occasions. Captain Jack's Toast to Women.

Capt. Jack Crawford, the poet scout, says it is an insult to ask any Grand Army man how he was treated by the people of Indianapolis. He says the people of the Hoosier capital are the finest in the world. He himself was royally treated while here and showed many honors. One evening last week while at a reception the host told him that he intended to present him with something with which he could "wet his throat." The Captain was about to decline, thinking liquor was to come, but instead there was a beautiful souvenir spoon. The poet scont was somewhat taken aback. but he was able to give a few impromptu lines in verse. At another reception where he was well received he offered this toast to "Women:

I faced the guns of Southern foe Back in the bloody long ago. When men of courage true and tried Have wished they had a place to bide I've faced the red man of the West When in his rage he went in quest Of scalps, when such as this I wear Would be to him a treasure rare. And yet I never felt such fright From human foeman, red or white. As comes upon me iu a place Where I am called upon to face The storm or soft, sweet light which flies From batteries of women's eyes. There's far more danger here, for when In heat of war excited men Discharge their guns at battling foe, Their aim is either high or low: From woman's eyes each gleaming dart Is aimed directly at the heart.

Action Against a Water Company A suit was filed in federal court, yesterday, for the appointment of a receiver for the Bloomington Water Company. The action is brought by C. E. Coon & Co., of New York, who aver that the company owes them $20,000, and that it is insolvent. The complaint further says that but nine miles of mains have been put down, and that the work will never be completed, because of the inability of the water company to dispose of its bonds.

The Kearsarge to Remain at Anchor During State Fair Week.

Talk on Continuing the Illumination of the Monument-Pageantry During State Fair Week.

While the heaviest part of the encampment committee's work is over, there yet remains much to be done in the way of settling up accounts. All day yesterday Executive Director Fortune was busy in settling with men who have been on the pay rolls of the executive committee. Everything is moving along nicely, and the settlements are being made as rapidly as possible. When asked what time would be required to make the settlements, Mr. Fortune said:

"I think we will do exceedingly well to get the business out of hand within three weeks. I know that the committee on the Washington encampment did not make all settlements until some time in December. So far as I can see the work here will be as difficult as it was there, and perhaps more so. The tents at the camps have all been hatled away and are now on board the cars. The barracks will be removed this week by the contractors." In speaking of the disposition to be made of the Kearsarge, Mr. Fortune said that the ship would be left standing until after the State fair. The committee has decided to have the ship opened during fair week for the inspection of visitors. No definite arrangements have been made to this effect, but it is likely that some sort of programme will be ardufing the evenings of fair week. An admission of 10 cents will also be charged. The electric lights on the monument have been taken down. The executive committeel as well as the public, dislikes to disperse with the monument illuminations, but the cost of maintainthem is very heavy. Whether monument will be illuminated at any future time depends upon the board nument commissioners. Mr. Portube said yesterday he should like very much if arrangements could be made to maintain the illuminations, but he knew of no steps being taken in that direction.

"While the cost of the illumination," said he, "would be very great, I think the State could afford to spend a great deal in that direction. The monument is the most beautiful attraction of the city and l am sorry it cannot be made more beautiful by

It is understood that the cost of putting the wires and lamps would be $10,000. In addition to this the operating expenses would be several hundred dollars a month. "What does the Commercial Club contemplate doing next? Is there any probabsolity that a pageantry will be arranged for each year?" was asked Mr. Fortune.
"There has been some talk on that subject, but I can say nothing encouraging at present," said he. "The question of instituting some such attraction for State fair week each year was discussed several years ago. believe something of the kind should and must be done if we expect to keep Indian-applis in the front ranks of American cities, The city's reputation is constantly growing But we must not stop. I think a mistake is made by not taking definite steps toward having a grand parade each year, as has been suggested. I believe the State fair board should consider this. In these advancing times people expect to see more than they saw ten years ago. State fair week is one of the important events of each year for Indianapolis. The people, however, tire of the same kind of attractions each year. There should be something more than balloon ascensions and displays of the products of agricul-

Governor Matthews will preside, and Tuttle, of the City Dispensary, was called to dress the woman's wound, which he at the conclusion of the exercises a reception will be given by the Governor and his staff. The place for holding the reception has not been determined upon, but will probably be at the Indiana State building. In the evening a fine display of fireworks will be given in honor of Indiana. THROWS THE BLAME ON BELL.

Building Inspector Fitchey Talks About That Fruit Stand.

Building Inspector Fitchey was asked yesterday why he had allowed the fruit stand, at the corner of Market and Pennsylvania streets to be rebuilt after having ordered it removed. He said that he had done so at the suggestion of City Prosecutor Bell, who told him that that one might as well stand until a general order was made to have all of them removed. This, it is understood, will be done in the near future. Mr. Fitchey is indignant to think that everybody is criticising him in regard to this particular stand. He says that he has obeyed the orders of the court throughout, and that he has not been allowed his own voice in the matter.

THEIR FORTY-FOURTH ANNOUNCE-MENT.

As the seasons come and go Dame Fashion i articular to see that the votaries of style are reminded that the time is at hand when the varied changes in form of dress must be observed. With brain constantly on the alert she permits no minutize in the details of exact make-up to escape her watchful eye, and the result is the pecullarities in change are noted; the small creases here and the slightly curved seams there are mapped and marked until a transformation is wrought and the prevailing styles for the season are finally announced. In the opening at Mesers. Egan & Treat's on Monday all these letails were displayed in the fabrics for gentlemen's fall and winter wear. This was the forty-tourth time that the firm has held public openings and has extended an invitation to the gentlemen of fashion to call and inspect the elaborate display of fine importations. Monday's opening showed that the house has not deteriorated in a desire to please public taste, and the display of domestic and imported woolens was up to the usual excellent exhibit. The fabrics were tastefully arranged and comprised the choicest products of the loom. Messre. Egan & Treat are gentlemen who largely exercise their own taste and judgment in the matter of style, and when they perceive a chance for improvement they readily grasp it, a peculiar individuality which has drawn to their doors the best class of

Mr. Tom P. Egan reports the following prevailing styles for the fail and winter: All coats will be prominently lengthened a feature which took hold upon fashion about a year ago, but did not receive positive recognition until the past spring. when it became a fact and not a conception

DOUBLE-BREASTED FROCK SUIT Will be the leader for the gentleman's wardrobe. It will be the correct idea for church-going, receptions, weddings and afternoon dress occasions. It is suitable for all ages and sizes, a feature which commends it, and with its finish and appearance it will be exceedingly dressy. THREE-BUTTON CUTAWAY.

This garment is a bundle of style and is considered the some of taste. Its convenience and neatness adapts it as a business suit, and is accepted as afternoon dress when made from black materials. It stands next to the double-breasted frock. The edges, sleeves, etc., will be finished same as the frock coat, with about same materials. with some additions of fancy worsted, etc. TROUSERS.

Trousers should be of same material as the coat if fancy suiting be used. However, if the coat and vest are of solid color, the trousers may be of same material, or checks and stripes are admissable. The widths same as for double-breasted frock suit trousers are correct.

ONE-BUTTON CUTAWAY. The one-button cutaway has undergone a change which adapts it to the perfect measure of the fat man as well as the lean. and makes him graceful indeed. It is a studied success that meets the good tastes of all and gives a "dressy" appearance hardly anticipated.

THE SACK SUIT. This season's sack suit combines comfort and convenience, and for business, traveling, etc., is a leader. It does not figure on social occasions, and is ruled out where dress costume is required. It promises to be the favorite fall and winter suit for its purposes. The single-breasted three-button cutaway sack will probably be most in demand by fine trade. The materials extend from plain black cheviots to fancy cheviots and worsteds, with plaided, striped and checked goods in large variety of colors and designs, the gray shades, however, predominating.

EVENING DRESS. The evening dress is always the admitted costume that holds the key to fashion and cultured taste. This season's materials will be fine twill worsteds, thibets, unshorn cassimeres and very firm Wales cheviots, leaning somewhat to worsteds as a favorite. Dark gray vicuna chevicts have been largely sold to some of the finest trade; also Oxford mixtures, not a thibet nor a cheviot, but a new idea is shown. It would seem that dark gray evening dress is to be brought out. The cut is longer and the style is more graceful. The vest is single-breasted when of the same material; bas a light roll collar, straight crease, and closes with three buttons. The trousers are shapely, in widths of 1812 inches at knee and 1712 at ankle. The general finish is a side seam, to show stripe as self woven, the whole being stylish throughout.

FALL AND WINTER OVERCOATS. The Chesterfield or fly front will probably lead in style during the fall-made in cheviots and other untinished materials in black and blue and Oxford and Cambridge greys, the lengths for fall being forty-two and forty-four inches, while winter calls for forty-three to forty-five mehes. The Kennel coat is pronounced a "take" for its handsome style, and bids fair to be received with much favor.

Messrs. Egan & Treat hit upon an opportune time for the opening, whether from a stroke of policy or by accident, it being encampment time and the city full of visitors, many of whom took advantage to view the elegant display.
